We have tried to include as much information as possible in the pack.

As everyone's situation is different, you may find that there is information in this pack that doesn't apply to you.

You may also use it to make notes, store appointments, and add letters, leaflets and anything else you may find useful.

What is Self Care

... and what does it mean for me?

Looking after yourself in a healthy way, whether it's brushing your teeth, taking medicine when you have a cold, or doing some exercise, is really important to help to keep yourself as well as possible.

If you have a long-term condition, there are extra things you may need to consider, such as making changes to your diet, different types of exercise or different types of medication you may need to take.

It is important to stay active and do things that are important to you, such as gardening, seeing friends and family, going on holiday, or continuing to work where possible. Self care involves looking at what you can do and want to do, rather than what you can't do.

Living a healthy lifestyle is an important part of self care for everyone. You can take responsibility for your own health and wellbeing, with support from the people involved in your care.

When you talk to your doctor or nurse about your condition, you may want to discuss some of the things you need to do to stay well. Some of these will be things that you do yourself, such as eating healthily, exercising, or taking your medicines at the right time.

NHS Choices

There's lots of useful information about keeping well and healthy living. Look out for the Live Well section of the NHS Choices website. If you're living with a long-term condition, Your health, your way has advice on self care and taking control of your health.

www.nhs.uk

Self Care is committed to working in collaboration across Bradford CBMDC, Bradford City CCG, Bradford Districts CCG and Airedale, Wharfedale and Craven.

What is dementia?

Dementia is an umbrella term for a set of symptoms that may include:

- Memory loss
- Difficulties with processing information
- Difficulties with problem solving
- Difficulties with speech and language

Dementia is caused by damage to the brain by diseases such as Alzheimer's or a series of strokes.

Dementia is progressive which means that it will gradually get worse over time.

A diagnosis of dementia can be scary and confusing. However it is possible to live well with the illness.

There are organisations that can give information and support about services available and how to cope and live well with dementia.

There are also a number activity and peer support groups that you can access. As with any condition it is important to plan for the future and look after all aspects of your health and wellbeing.

A really useful source of information for people living with dementia, their families and friends is 'The dementia guide.'

Memory

Being given a diagnosis of dementia can be worrying, upsetting and confusing. It can also be hard for those around you but there is much you can do to make life easier and more enjoyable both now and in the future.

Problems to do with your memory can have different causes. You can discuss these with your doctor.

There is a very useful booklet called the 'Memory handbook' - a practical guide to living with memory problems.

If you find it hard to remember things, you may find it useful to follow these tips:

- Don't be afraid to ask questions
- Don't be afraid to say that you have not understood
- Don't be afraid to say that you have forgotten what has been said.

Remember, it is not your fault if you can't remember as well as you used to.

Alzheimer's Society produces free helpcards that help to explain your condition to anyone you might encounter in daily life.

Memory

Some things that might help you with your memory

Use a medication reminder box. Your pharmacist should be able to help you to get one and put your medication in the right compartments for you

- Using a diary or calendar
- Using a memo board or whiteboard
- Using sticky notes and reminders
- Stick notes on the inside of doors reminding you to take your keys
- Make lists and tick off tasks you complete
- Labelling cupboard doors and room doors to remind you where things are
- Using stronger light bulbs or task lamps to improve lighting
- Using coloured drinking glasses, placemats and coasters to improve contrast
- Keep things in the same place, especially things you use all the time such as keys or glasses, and have a routine
- Keep helpful phone numbers by the telephone where you can see them
- Displaying a timetable of your usual routine—one is included in the pack, on pages 18, 19, 20 and 21
- Breaking information into smaller chunks can help you remember more easily. For example it might be easier to remember phone numbers like this, as it's always easier to do once someone has shown you how
- Rhymes can be useful. For example, Richard of York Gained Battle In Vain can be used to remember Red Orange Yellow Green Indigo and Violet
- Using pictures to help remember. Photos can be used as prompts
- If you lose something imagine yourself putting it down
- If you can't remember why you went upstairs, picture yourself where you were when you decided to go upstairs. Retracing your footsteps mentally or physically can help retrace your train of thought
- If you can't remember a recipe try picturing yourself cooking it and adding all the ingredients
- Smells, tastes and music can all prompt memories

You might also find it helpful to:

- Join a group/Dementia Cafe – stay active and occupied

Joining a group or attending a dementia café can be a good way to find something meaningful to do, meeting other people and receiving support. There are also groups for families and friends. To find a group that suits you and or those who support you, contact The Alzheimer's Society:

01274 586008 / 01756 799971 / 01423 813464

- Talk to a support worker

A support worker can help you talk through some of the difficulties you might be having and help you to better understand your illness. They can also help you to make contact with others in a similar situation and point you in the right direction for other sources of help.

You can speak to a support worker on:

Dementia Friendly Communities

People with dementia and their carers talk about the everyday challenges they face in living well with dementia. This can include difficulty using technology, getting appropriate service in shops, banks and post offices and in using transport, going on holiday, maintaining social contact and hobbies. Although help from health and care services is vitally important, making it possible for people affected by dementia to live well will require help from people and organisations across society.

Dementia friendly communities

The dementia friendly communities programme focuses on improving the inclusion and quality of life of people with dementia. We want to make Bradford district a dementia friendly community.

In order to do this we are working to make sure people in the community and services are aware of and understand more about dementia so people with dementia and their carers will feel included in their community, be more independent and have more choice and control over their lives.

Initiatives are taking place across the district creating awareness about making communities easy to access and more accepting. Working with shops, businesses and services, work is being planned in training staff about dementia, support that customers may need and that the environment is improved, for example, by clearer signs and lighting.

Look out for the 'Dementia Friendly' symbol in shops and services near you to identify which ones are working to be dementia friendly, this is an ongoing process so keep looking as more places will display this sign over time.

If you or your local shops and services want to know more about this work please contact the Alzheimer's Society.

Looking after your health

It is important to take good care of your health.

Having dementia should not mean that you feel ill, so always check with your doctor if you feel unwell.

This is important because any illness can make you feel more confused and forgetful.

- Try to eat balanced meals
- Try to take regular exercise
- Enjoy the odd alcoholic drink if you want - but avoid too much alcohol, as it may make you more disoriented
- If you are on medication, ask your doctor to check whether it is essential, as it can sometimes increase confusion
- Poor vision and poor hearing can make you more confused, so it is important to have regular eye and hearing checks
- Painful teeth, gums or dentures can also make life more difficult. Make sure that you have regular dental check-ups
- If you want help to stop smoking or have trouble sleeping ask your doctor for advice
- Notice the signs you are feeling stressed and do something you enjoy
- Keeping your mind stimulated can also support physical health, such as reading, jigsaws, games and chess
- Smiling actually does improve your mood

Keeping socially active

Dementia can sometimes be a very isolating illness. Reducing isolation helps improve and maintain your mood.

Doing activities that you enjoy and keeping as active as possible can help you cope better with the effects of dementia.

Enjoying life

Some of your previous interests may seem too stressful or demanding. But there will be many activities that will still give you satisfaction.

- Try to find things that you still enjoy doing such as listening to music, knitting, playing a game, exercising or talking to a friend
- Caring for a pet can be very satisfying and reassuring. Taking a dog for a walk is a good way of getting regular exercise
- Conversation between large groups of people can be hard to follow, so you may prefer friends or family to visit one or two at a time
- Try to concentrate on what you can still do, rather than worrying about what you can't
- Consider starting a life history book. Use a simple scrapbook or photo album to record details of your past and present life that will be helpful for anyone who may be supporting you. This is something your family and friends can help you with, and it is a great opportunity to share your history, memories and thoughts with those close to you

Relationships

Dementia can affect the whole family. It is important to have a good support network of supportive people that you trust. You may need a carer or support from relatives, families or friends. Having any long term condition can put a strain on relationships.

Things that might help include:

Talking things over

You will need to discuss plans for the future with those who are closest to you and with certain professionals.

If your family and friends do not already know about your diagnosis, try to tell them as soon as possible. At first, they may not want to believe you if they are very upset by the news. Try to discuss matters in a calm way.

- It will help if you can talk about your own wishes for the future, but try not to ask people to make promises now that may be difficult for them to keep later. You may find it helpful to write your wishes down
- It may help if you can talk about your feelings to someone you trust outside the family

Relationship Advice

If dementia is putting a strain on family relationships, you might want to talk to someone from Relate. They offer advice, consultations, sex therapy, relationship counselling, workshops and support face-to-face and by phone.

Counsellors are experienced relationship experts and are specially trained to work with families to help people resolve their problems.

Taking care of yourself

Tips on taking care of yourself:

- Keep any inserts from repeat prescriptions with this pack so that you remember which medication is important to take
- Regularly check with your pharmacist or doctor to ensure you are taking the right medication
- It is important to have a health check each year. Remind your doctor if it has been longer than a year or you feel your health has changed
- The free annual flu jab can reduce the risk of getting seriously ill in winter months and is available to over 65 year-olds and those with serious medical conditions. Ask your doctor for details
- You should also contact your doctor if you haven't had the pneumococcal vaccine, routinely offered to over 65s, and the shingles vaccine, currently given to those aged 70 and 79 year olds
- If you have had a fall or are at risk of falling in the future, you can be assessed for support in your own home. Contact your doctor or District Nurse to get a Falls Assessment. These are carried out by individual practices or District Nursing teams

Everyone has the right to continence where achievable. With proper assessment and care, incontinence may be cured, improved or made easier to live with

Eyes

Having an eye examination is really important for you because symptoms of dementia may cover up the symptoms of sight loss.

With dementia, additional sight loss may also increase your risk of falls or sense of disorientation.

RNIB (Royal National Institute of Blind People) recommends that you have regular eye examinations to check your vision as well as your eye health. Biannual sight tests are free if you are over the age of 60. If you are over the age of 70 they are free annually.

Alternative tests and approaches are available to help you, with some practitioners having particular experience of working with people who have dementia. Some opticians will even come to your home or make arrangements to see you at a time most suited to you. Speak to your local optician to see what support they can offer or contact RNIB for further advice.

Everyday routines

Managing your routine

You may find it helpful to maintain your previous routine as much as possible:

- As your dementia develops, you may find it increasingly reassuring to do things at the same time each day or each week
- Nevertheless, try to keep on making the occasional one-off visit or trip, to keep life interesting and enjoyable
- Keep up things you like doing for as long as possible - if you find this difficult, try to take things at a slower pace
- It may help other people, including family and friends, if you keep a record of your usual routine so they are aware of your timetable and can work together to support you (there is a chart on pages 18–21 to help you do this)

Planning for the future

Work

If you are still at work and are finding it stressful there may be an opportunity to switch to a less demanding job or to reduce your hours.

Seek expert advice on your pension rights if an occupational pension is due to you. It may be possible to negotiate a lump sum.

Before leaving work, check whether there are benefits that you or your family may be entitled to. If necessary, your personnel department or manager should be able to help you make enquiries.

Driving

If you drive, you may have to give up doing so either now or in the near future.

- Anyone who drives and has a medical condition that may affect their ability to drive, such as dementia, must inform the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Authority (DVLA) who will assess every case individually
- It is a criminal offence not to inform the DVLA of your diagnosis
- Check with your insurance company to make sure you are still covered following your diagnosis

End of life care

You may want to talk about your wishes for your end of life care, which may be difficult for you and your family to discuss. Reassure your family that you are not being morbid but want to share your thoughts around what you would like to happen to make it easier for them when the time comes.

Benefit checks

Many people don't claim the benefits they are entitled to.

Some people who have been given a diagnosis of dementia and/or those who care for them, may be entitled to certain benefits or concessions such as:

- Personal Independence Payment (PIP)
- Attendance Allowance
- Council Tax Disregard
- Blue Badge (parking permit)
- Carers Allowance
- Concessionary travel permits
- Cinema Pass
- Radar key (access to disabled toilets)

You are entitled to a benefits check to ensure you are receiving the right amount. The organisations listed below can help you with this:

Disability Advice Bradford 01274 609895

Bradford and Airedale Citizens Advice Bureau 0844 245 1282

Department of Work & Pensions 0845 60 60 265

Putting your affairs in order

Now is the time to make sure that any important documents are in order and can easily be found.

These include details of your mortgage or tenancy agreement, insurance policies, bank statements or building society books.

Go through all the details with a member of your family, partner or trusted friend.

- Sort out any recent bills, guarantees and regular payments. It might be a good idea to arrange to pay your regular household bills by direct debit, if you are not already doing so. Details of how to do this are given on each bill
- Look again at your Will and make sure that it expresses your wishes, or consult a solicitor about making a new one
- Consider making an advance decision. An advance decision allows a person to state what forms of medical treatment they would or would not like should they become unable to decide for themselves in the future
- Grant lasting powers of attorney, if you have not already done so. This enables you to appoint someone to manage your legal, financial and health affairs and make decisions on your behalf should you become unable to do this for yourself

Factsheets are available from the Alzheimer's Society:

- Advance decision - Factsheet 463
- Enduring Power of Attorney and Lasting Powers of Attorney - Factsheet 472
- Financial and legal affairs - Factsheet 467

Notes:

Lasting Power of Attorney

When planning for the future, it is a good idea to think about a Lasting Power of Attorney (LPA).

An LPA is a legal tool that enables you to appoint someone to make certain decisions on your behalf. The person you choose can manage your finances for you in the future if you reach a point where you are no longer able to make decisions for yourself.

There are two types of LPA:

- Property and Affairs
- Health and Welfare

For more information on LPA's or how to apply or any of the benefits listed above contact:

Notes:

Support in hospitals

In Bradford District and Airedale, Wharfedale & Craven, the main hospitals including, Bradford Royal Infirmary, St Luke's Hospital and Airedale Hospital have schemes to ensure people with dementia are properly supported during their stay. This means that all people involved in your care will be made aware of your needs, and that all staff are given formal training about dementia and how to support you.

If you need to go into hospital in for any reason, it would be advisable to inform staff in advance or on admission, that you have a diagnosis of dementia and should receive sensitive and appropriate support.

You can also get a copy of the 'This is me' leaflet, for you to use, to tell staff about your needs, preferences, likes, dislikes and interests.

This can be ordered or collected through the Alzheimer's Society.

forget-me-not

After working together with patients and carers, the Bradford Teaching Hospitals NHS Foundation Trust adopted the forget-me-not patient identifier scheme.

This ensures that if you go into hospital, Bradford Royal Infirmary and St Luke's Hospital, the forget-me-not symbol is placed on your medical records and above your bed to immediately provide a visual alert to health professionals, non-clinical services and volunteers as to the your diagnosis of dementia. This enables staff to ensure that you are given the appropriate care, time and reassurance that you need.

Support for diverse communities

Bradford District has a wide range of communities with people speaking many different languages, from different cultures with different needs and specific support available to them. The area has a range of specialist organisations that aim to meet the information and support needs of Black and Minority Ethnic communities.

Meri Yaadain Dementia Team is one such organisation that has been raising the awareness of dementia amongst the BME communities (especially South Asian) to help people with dementia and their families or carers to understand the dementia and the impact it has on people's lives. The Meri Yaadain Dementia Team are able to take referrals from health, social care and VCS organisations or directly from individuals. They help to meet information needs, help through a support group and limited advocacy. Information is available in a number of community languages as well as a DVD in Urdu with English subtitles.

For more information or a referral either ring the team on 01274 431308

akhlak.rauf@bradford.gov.uk

www.meriyaadain.co.uk

There are also many other organisations offering community based support for older people, with trained staff, who are able to provide culturally appropriate general support. You can find out more, in Connect to Support Bradford District, under 'local groups and activities.'

- Contact your local social services department for details of services that they can arrange. Find out about getting a community care assessment to assess your needs. Social Services departments are listed in the phone book under the name of the local authority

A factsheet is available from the Alzheimer's Society:

- Community Care Assessment - Factsheet 419

Bradford District Care Trust

Bradford District Care Trust provide assessment and treatment services for people with dementia. You may have attended the Memory Assessment and Treatment service provided by the trust, and if so will hopefully have been given support and possibly medication to help you live well with this condition. At some point, however, it is possible that you may experience problems such as low mood, anxiety, irritability and anger, and agitation. You may even sometimes experience distressing ideas or visions of things that are not there. These symptoms do not happen to everyone with dementia, but if they did occur they could be very upsetting both for you and those that are close to you.

There are, however, treatments available for these symptoms that services run by Bradford District Care Trust can offer you. You may benefit from assessment by a doctor, and support by a team of community nurses, occupational therapist, clinical psychologists and support workers. The support provided may include medication and talking therapy, and is usually very helpful in treating these problems. For a very small number of people, these symptoms might be too severe to manage at home, and admission to hospital for assessment and treatment may be needed. This is rare, as most people can be helped while remaining out of hospital; but for those that need in patient care, they will be cared for by the same doctor as when at home, and will be helped by a team of highly experienced nurses on Ward 24 Specialist Assessment Unit at Airedale General Hospital.

In addition, there are many people with dementia who reside in care homes, and who often have other health problems alongside memory loss. Bradford District Care Trust provides a care home liaison service, where experienced community mental health nurses work with community matrons, with the support of consultant psychiatrists, to help care homes provide good care for people with dementia and to ensure your needs are recognised and provided for.

Finally, you may sometimes find that you become unwell due to problems with your physical health, and may need to be admitted to an acute hospital such as Bradford Royal Infirmary. Bradford District Care Trust provides an acute hospital liaison service for people with dementia admitted to hospital. This is staffed by mental health nurses with support from consultant psychiatrists. Staff in the acute hospital can contact the liaison service for advice and support in providing good care to people with dementia who find themselves in hospital, and the liaison nurses can refer people to the Community Mental Health team for support after discharge if this is needed.

Access to Bradford District Care Trust services is by referral from other services providing support to you, either the family doctor, Community Matron or Acute hospital staff; but you or your carer, if you have one, can raise the question of whether referral would be of benefit.

More information about the services provided by Bradford District Care Trust can be found at:
